TEXT

They shall grow not old,
as we that are left grow old;
Age shall not weary them,
nor the years condemn.
At the going down of the sun
and in the morning
We will remember them.

For the Fallen, Laurence Binyon (1869-1943)

PERFORMANCE NOTES

The dashed slurs indicate that no breath should be taken between the connected notes.

PROGRAMME NOTES

This short work is dedicated in memory of my late maternal grandmother. Though 2020 has been a year where social distancing is the norm, and families are unable to make their usual grave visitation arrangements, we can still remember our loved ones in our hearts, wherever we may be.
